Grounds for Appeal

The Appellant provided the following reasons for appealing the decision of the Development Authority:

There is already very limited parking along this street especially due to the ever growing number of infills and lot splitting in the area, and the Catholic Social Services building about 200 meters away. The residents at that address often have six vehicles parked on the street with the owner, her two grown-up children, and each of their three significant others. The duplex that they reside in would technically only have space for a single vehicle within the frontage of their property,so these residents alone already cause a great deal of parking congestion. There are other skinny houses on this street and a triplex is in the final building stages a few doors down. It is very questionable as to why a residential area like this would be permitted to have a major home based business that would allow customers to visit the premises, whereby increasing traffic in a residential area and causing additional parking stress as the area continues to subdivide with infills.

As well, it is widely known that home bakeries are often able to skirt around regulations that commercial bakeries are mandated to follow. It is one thing to have a bakery in a stand alone home, but seems like a major safety hazard to allow a bakery to be run (with less industry guidance and regulations than a commercial bakery) in a home that shares walls with other homes

Many of the neighbors on this street are against the idea of this major home business being run out of the home.
